

IN FRANCE; TO REPRESENT FLYING FISH

Christening of first Liberty plane in France, above, and "Flying Fish" and its American pilot.

The initial flight of the first Liberty plane in France was made recently. The plane was christened by Mrs. Florence H. Kendall. Representatives of the allied countries and welfare workers attended the ceremony. The upper photo shows the plane at the time of the christening. The American flag is draped over its nose. The lower picture shows one of the unique "ships" in France. It is a Dieupont plane painted to represent a fish. Even the eyes of the fish have been designed on the sides of the body. Its American pilot is standing alongside of it. Captain Herteaux, famous French flier, has said: "We now have several thousand American planes in France. American bombing planes are of the highest quality and are reaching to front regularly."

...though the... since gone across to France, Captain Law believes he will soon be ordered to take transport for the battle front. Captain Law has worked up from the bottom of railroading, having started as a telegrapher. He has held official positions with all the big roads of the country and some of the small ones as well. The southeastern part of the United States is the only part of this country in which he has not followed the profession. He has been telegrapher, dispatcher, chief dispatcher, assistant superintendent and finally superintendent. This varied experience in control of traffic and railroad-ing under all kinds of conditions, obstacles having been met on mountain and prairie with high water and snows, makes him a valuable man to the army of railroad builders and operators on the western front, and it was because he knew of Captain Law's special fitness to take charge of railroad divisions under any conditions that Col. Mears solicited him to apply for a commission. Captain Law has been chief dispatcher and assistant superintendent of both the Southern Pacific and Union Pacific railroads, having had his headquarters in Ogden when with the Union Pacific twelve years ago. He has also held official positions with roads in British Columbia. Just who will take the place of Mr. Law as superintendent of the electric line cannot be announced at the present time, as W. A. Whitney, general
